Ping Nakara boutique hotel and spa

Chiang Mai Colonial Style, back to the old charm

In the early 1900s Chiang Mai was at the centre of a thriving teak industry. Foreign managers oversaw logging concessions throughout the forests of Northern Thailand. Today the 'Teak Wallahs' are gone. But the river and forestry station remain, and the relaxed ambience of Chiang Mai city is just as enticing as ever.

The Ping Nakara takes inspiration from these times past with an intimate hotel built in the elegant colonial style. The hotel's graceful gingerbread architecture is accented by hand-carved fretwork and creates a cool and restful environment. This sophisticated design is matched by relaxed yet professional service, providing a welcoming retreat for the travelers.

In each of the 19 rooms at Ping Nakara Boutique Hotel and Spa, the "mood" is different depending on the design and color that reflects the uniqueness of different Thai flowers (each one decorated with unique hand-painted pictures and hand-crafted furniture). Moreover, furniture and interior decoration here will make you think of the past when Chiang Mai was trade center in the northern kingdom. If you pay close attention, you will find that every inch of place tells us stories of the past.

The Luxurious Nakara Spa is a center for the application of Ayurvedic spa treatments for holistic health and relaxation. Nakara Spa is operated by Dr. Rajeev Manwah and Dr. Suchada Manwah, well known ayurvedic practitioners trained in India and leaders in the study of holistic health.

You can enjoy all day dining at The Ping Nakara Restaurant with extraordinary Asian and Western selections. Fresh coffee and tea are available throughout the day. The kitchen is ready to prepare a range of gourmet dishes for guests at any time from morning until late afternoon. There is also a limited menu available for late dining and room service. With a superb location, Ping Nakara Boutique Hotel & Spa surrounded by lush tropical gardens and charming colonial houses and buildings, just 5 minutes walk from Chiang Mai's famous Night Bazaar. At Ping Nakara Boutique Hotel and Spa, you wish time could stop because there's endless pleasurable and unforgettable experience.
